Our Métis Survivors (OMS): A Residential School Survivor Archival Project

February 25, 2027

1:30-3:00pm MT

This session aims to inform members of the Métis community about what the project is, what its goals are, and to extend the opportunity for Survivors to participate in the OMS project.
Please note that this session will not be recorded or uploaded to our website.*

This session was set up in collaboration with the Alberta Indigenous Virtual Care Clinic (AIVCC)

Learning Outcomes:

- What the OMS project seeks to achieve
- Who this project is for
- How the stories are being recorded, stored, and accessed
- Why Indigenous data sovereignty is important

Speakers:

Cassidy Cameron, Intergovernmental Relations Project Archivist - Cassidy sits with Survivors in an informal and relaxed interview setting to listen to and record their stories. She also manages the oral history records gathered during the project and ensures that they are preserved in a matter that respects Indigenous understandings of stewardship and data sovereignty.

Target Audience: Those who are Métis residential, day school, and intergenerational Survivors who want to share their story, or be informed about what the Otipemisiwak Métis Government is doing on behalf of Survivors in the community. The session is open to anyone who is interested in learning more about the Métis experience of Residential Schools and how we intend to use these stories as an educational tool
