

Introducing KEMIO: Your New Tool for Chlorine Monitoring in Drinking Water Supplies

January 22nd, 2021

10:30-11:30

EPHS is rolling out a new instrument for community-based water monitoring called Kemio. This will replace what communities are currently using, Chlorosense, which is being phased out by the manufacturer in the near future. This will be an information session to introduce this new instrument, its features and its use, as well as provide resources and answer any questions from communities. After this session your community Environmental Public Health Officer will be in contact to follow up and provide further support and training.

Learning Objective:

- Learn about the new instrument being deployed for water quality monitoring;
- Learn how to use the new instrument;
- Familiarize yourself with resources available to support the transition to Kemio.

Speakers:

Tony Thepsouvanh, Senior Environmental Public Health Officer (North) Environmental Public Health Services ISC, FNIHB
Keelaina Oostenbrink, Environmental Public Health Officer Environmental Public Health Services ISC, FNIHB
Nicolette Wodzinski, Environmental Public Health Data Technologist Environmental Public Health Services ISC, FNIHB

Target Audience:

Community Health Representatives, Community Based Water Monitors (and their back-up staff), Health Directors, Other community health staff working in drinking water quality.
