

Walking Beside Indigenous Community Partners through Indigenous-led Training and Applied Research

May 26, 2026

1:30-3:00pm MT

In this session, NAIT Indigenous Partnerships & Engagement will outline its engagement model, its approach to community-led partnerships, our ability to utilize NAIT's in-house research and instructional expertise to co-deliver training and research alongside our partners.

This session was set up in collaboration with the Alberta Indigenous Virtual Care Clinic (AIVCC)

Learning Outcomes:

- Understand how NAIT partners with Indigenous Communities
- Understand NAIT Indigenous Partnerships & Engagement's key offerings

Speakers:

Matthew Menzies, Community Engagement Specialist, NAIT Indigenous Partnerships & Engagement. Matthew's role at NAIT is the mobilization, customization, and implementation of Indigenous Community-led Applied Research and Community-based Training. NAIT Indigenous Partnerships & Engagement walks beside our community and Nation partners to assist them in the achievement of their sovereignty goals. Through capacity-building, training, and applied research, we serve the goals of our partners by customizing every delivery to meet the goals of communities and Nations, and their peoples. Our programs meet our partners where they are and in the ways that honour and respect their traditional knowledge and perspectives. We are driven by the success of our partners, by creating meaningful connections within their communities and Nations, and by playing a part in their journeys toward sovereignty.

Target Audience: Any staff that actively partners with First Nations or Métis Communities
