

Info Session on The Digital Sexual Violence Support Centre (DSVSC)

August 19, 2026

10:00-11:30am MT

The Digital Sexual Violence Support Centre is a BIPOC and survivor-led non-profit that offers nation-wide peer support, resource navigation, workshops, trainings and community events to support adults who have experienced technology-facilitated sexual violence (TFSV) in Canada. Please note that themes related to sexual violence, teen dating violence and intimate partner violence may be discussed during the info session.

Learning Outcomes:

- Understand the history, mission, and evolution of the DSVSC and its role in supporting adult victims-survivors of technology-facilitated sexual violence (TFSV) in Canada
- Recognize how technology-facilitated sexual violence is defined and understood within the Canadian context
- Explore the support services and resources available through the DSVSC for adult victims-survivors of TFSV
- Identify the impact and importance of the DSVSC's work in advancing awareness, support, and advocacy for individuals affected by TFSV in Canada

Speakers:

Natasha Dixon (she/her) is the founder and executive director of the Digital Sexual Violence Support Centre (DSVSC). Natasha holds a master's degree in public and international affairs plus a honours bachelor's degree in political science from York University's Glendon College. She holds over 10 years of experience in conducting social policy research and previously co-led qualitative research for the Government of Ontario's healing circles program, under the provincial commitment to supporting Indigenous women, girls, non-binary, and two-spirit folks.

Target Audience: Social service providers, health practitioners, parents, legal professionals, academics and mature adults
